said stack, and is provided with a device for sensing the position of the stack of banknotes, connected to the mechanism for displacement of the element with a collecting unit, the element for placing the stack of banknotes and the container with packing material in the form of bands of tape are installed relative to one another on the frame in such a way that a stack of banknotes, after deformation thereof, is inserted into a band fed from the container.

Therefore, the invention according to independent claim 1 and dependent claim 2 meets the requirement of novelty.

Said distinguishing features are not known and not obvious from the prior art (D2-D4), and ensure that a stack of banknotes can be wrapped efficiently using a pre-prepared band of packing material whose dimensions correspond to the dimensions of the stack, as a result of which the stack of banknotes is enveloped tightly by the band of packing material, the wrapping process itself being extremely simple, and wrapping time reduced to a minimum. Therefore claims 1-2 meet the requirement of inventive step.

Claims 1-2 are industrially applicable.

D2-D4 describe the background art for this problem.

The prior art closest to the invention characterised in independent claim 1 is the device disclosed in D1 for wrapping stacks of banknotes, comprising a frame, a container with packing material, a method for feeding the packing material, and an element for positioning a stack of banknotes.

The device according to claim 1 differs from the disclosure of D1 in that the container with packing material is in the form of a box-like structure, the packing material is in the form of bands of tape, flattened and folded into a stack inside the container, the device for feeding the packing material is in the form of an element with a collecting unit provided with a mechanism for displacement thereof, the element for positioning the stack of banknotes is able to distort the stack of banknotes relative to the longitudinal axis of
